

England ace Terry aims to cheer on his brother

Older brother: Paul Terry in action

Scouting: John Terry will be there

By Nathan Jones

ENGLAND star John Terry will be at Huish Park on Sunday to cheer on his brother Paul and Yeovil Town in their FA Cup clash with Liverpool.

The Chelsea star will be in the Blues squad for their tie at Watford on Saturday lunchtime - a game that will also be televised.

And afterwards he will travel down to Somerset to watch his older brother play for Yeovil for the first time.

John's trip will also be something of a scouting mission as Liverpool visit Chelsea in the Premiership three days after the tie.

Paul said: "He has been waiting for a chance to come down here and now he has the opportunity to do it, which will be great.

"He hasn't really said anything about us playing Liverpool because cup matches are one-off games and they have obviously got their plans.

"We just want to play our own game and maybe we can surprise them."

Paul signed for Yeovil back in August and made his first appearance for the club on the same night that John played his first full international in England.

While John was starring against Croatia at Portman Road, Paul was playing against Cardiff City reserves at Huish Park.

Paul said: "It was disappointing that I missed him playing for England but at the end of the day I had a job to do playing for Yeovil.

"John was hoping we would draw Chelsea and he was a bit disappointed when we got Liverpool because he wanted it so much, but it's a massive tie for us."
